Agenda:

- 1. Derivatives 1:00 pages 85-86
- 2. Dialogue: “Eight Good Reasons”
- 3. Rules for Dialogue

Homework:

- 1. Write a conversation as dialogue. Each speaker must speak twice. Follow the rules and consider the advice of “Eight Good Reasons.”
- 2. Anything you still owe me.

With your Clock Buddy

1. Restate Kernan's three opinions into your own words (see the first half of the first page).
2. Do you agree with her? Why or why not?
3. How is good fictional dialogue different from real-life conversations? Highlight or underline key points in this section. (Reason 1)
4. Do you agree with her second reason? Explain. (Reason 2)
5. Read the examples and the explanations for each of the remaining reasons (3-8). Highlight or underline the key idea in each explanation.

What do you observe?

- 1. Punctuation
- 2. Capitalization
- 3. Paragraphing

Dialogue

- Use commas to separate dialogue from the rest of the sentence.
  - He said, “Let’s go outside,” so we left.
- Do not use commas if the dialogue ends in a question mark or exclamation point.
  - He said, “Let’s go outside!” so we ran.
  - “Did you really just say that?” I asked.
- If the sentence is a ? or ! but the dialogue is not, the punctuation goes outside the dialogue
  - Did he really just say, “I can’t find my wallet”?
- Begin a new paragraph each time you change speakers.
  - He shouted, “Let’s go outside!”
  - “Did you really just say that?” I asked. “Have you heard the weather reports about the temperature?”

- Capitalize the beginning of a sentence of dialogue.
  - Joe said, “Where’s the dog?”
- Alternative/phonetic spellings do not work in dialogue, but dialect does. Use an apostrophe to replace removed letters.
  - “I have to go to the store b/c we’re out of milk,” she said.
NO
  - “I have to go to the store ‘cause we’re out of milk,” she said. YES

Special Cases for Dialogue

- Quotes/dialogue within quotes/dialogue:
  - Beginning, “First quote, ‘Second quote,’ end of first quote,” end of sentence.
  - She squinted in the bright light and said, “My dad always used to say, ‘Take care of your car and it will take care of you,’ so I’m off to get my oil changed.”
- Multi-paragraph quotes with one speaker:
  - Use “ at the beginning of each paragraph, but do not use ” until the quote ends.

Homework

- Write out a short conversation (real or fictitious) with at least 2 speakers.
- Each speaker must speak at least twice.
- Follow the rules.
- Consider the advice from “Eight Good Reasons”
