Remind101.com and Twitter

In addition to my website, I have signed up for two different technology services to help students during non-school hours. These are optional, but may be useful for students who subscribe.

Remind101.com This site is new to me. Students (and parents) can subscribe and receive text messages from teachers without either party seeing each other's phone number. I will be able to send out reminders about homework or deadlines, etc.

To subscribe, send a text message to this number (424) 206-5416.

The message of the text should be

@polzin for Honors

@cpeng11 for College Prep English 11

@apeuropean for AP European History

Twitter I used my twitter account last year solely for AP European History. I retweeted famous quotations and short articles about European places and events. Also, as the exam grew nearer, I tweeted review questions.

This year, I hope to expand my twitter to include my English classes. I anticipate sending messages about grammar and authors as well as posting homework reminders and retweeting famous quotations.

I do not follow students or use these accounts for social media.
